HAMPTON MAKES A CLOSE COMPARISON

To inform those who do not know about the cost of maintaining the water and park departments and the Carnegie library, Commissioner Hampton has furnished the following comparative statement for July, August, September, October and November, comparing the same months with 1913 and 1912.

WATER DEPARTMENT.

	1912	1913	1914
Receipts	$25,135.66	$33,043.77	$67,419.12
Operation and maintenance	23,126.22	23,321.41	21,332.92
Please note decrease in cost of operation and maintenance each year.
Increase of revenue 1914 over 1913.			$3,475.35
Decrease in operation and maintenance.			1,988.18

Amount in favor of 1914.

PARK DEPARTMENT.

	1913	1914
Operation and Maintenance.	$9,171.10	$7,751.57
Showing reduction of.		$1,419.53

Operation and Maintenance.

Showing reduction of.

79.44

Total difference in favor of 1914.

$6,962.54

The Carnegie library for 1912, Commissioner Hampton explains, was practically the same as in 1913. The park department cost was much more on account of construction work.

ARESONI AND BRUHL PLEASE AN AUDIENCE

A large and enthusiastic audience greeted the opening number of artists' recitals brought by the Musical Art Institute and the Ladies' Music club to the Overholser Friday evening. And at no time during the evening did the audience fail to appreciate the interesting program presented by Enrico Aresoni, dramatic tenor of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera company, and Martin Bruhl, concert pianist.

A diversity of opinion seemed to exist after the performances as to the relative merits of the two artists, whose fame, however, rests upon a broader foundation of artistic excellence than the critical admiration of one audience.

Mr. Aresoni's voice had a depth and volume that is more often attributed to a baritone than a tenor voice, and its power, added to the robust vigor and fiery temperament of the singer, evidenced the dramatic qualities which have made his career in grand opera such a success. The aria from La Boheme was given with ardor and a depth of feeling which brought him back repeatedly until he responded with an encore.

Mr. Aresoni's generosity was shown in the arrangement of his program to include three of the great arias, when most artists grant only one or two of the most to any audience outside of the largest cities. His monologue from Otelio as well as Caruso's lament from Il Pagliaccio was sung with a dramatic intensity which marked every gradation of emotional expression.

SHE WANTS HUSBAND SUNDAY OPEN HOUSE

Chief of Police Receives Letter From "Petite Little Woman With Lustrous Golden Hair."

Police Chief Webb Jones believes that when the day comes he must lay aside his present duties he will find another occupation open to him.

Already visions of a gilt sign bearing the words, "Webb Jones's Marriage Bureau" come to him in idle moments.

Chief Jones has found a woman who wants a husband. She says she is a chic, petite little woman with lustrous golden hair, beautiful blushing eyes fringed with long black lashes, that curl slightly at the end which should attract a worthy bachelor.

Miss Ada Browning of 315 N. Ondley street, Kansas City, Mo., is the woman who desires an eligible, unmarried Catholic gentleman, who must be smooth shaven, about six feet tall and 35 years old, black hair, dark luminous eyes, and a "personal magnetism."

Chief Jones admits he doesn't know what to do. With Jay walking now to be looked after and the regular line of police work also on hand he says he will be forced to defer opening his agency until times are quieter.

A one-sided quarrel is soon ended.

AN EXHIBIT OF ART

University of Oklahoma Glee Clubs
Will Furnish Music to Visitors From City Sunday.

The University of Oklahoma, the Young Men's and the Young Women's Glee clubs will furnish music to Oklahoma City visitors at the art exhibit of oil paintings and other treasures in the museum of the Fine Arts building at Norman Sunday. America's best talent is represented in this exhibit, the greatest and most valuable ever assembled in Oklahoma.

The exhibit contains paintings valued as high as $5,000 apiece and was first prepared for students and now is open to all art lovers of the state. The glee club music will be furnished Sunday from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and the museum will be open until 6 p. m.

A large attendance of Oklahoma City people is expected as the exhibit ends December 15. The Oklahoma Railway company has announced a special excursion rate to Norman and return. The public is extended a cordial invitation.
